Picture of College From Air Published

Photograph of Campus Here Appears in St. Louis Paper and Will Be Used in School Magazine.

One of the first air pictures of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers College, taken and copyrighted by D. A. Caldwell, has been accepted for publication in the American School Board Journal, published at Milwaukee.

The view shows the entire campus and all the buildings, including the administration building, dormitory, new gymnasium and president's residence. It was taken from an elevation of 1,000 feet. The pilot of the plane was J. B. Antrim of Richards Field, Kansas City, flying the "Blue Ship," a four-passenger, Standard machine.

The picture also appeared a few days ago in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Pickering to Have a Weekly Paper

George Perrin Intends to Start One On Nov. 18—A 4-Page Edition At First.

Pickering is to have a weekly newspaper with George Perrin of Maryville as its publisher. He expects to issue the first number on Nov. 18. It will be a four page, seven column edition at first and will be increased in size if the patronage will justify.

For the present Mr. Perrin will have his paper printed in Maryville until arrangements can be made for a suitable office in Pickering.

Pickering has been without a newspaper for a number of years. Mr. Perrin located in Maryville just recently.

CHIEF ISSUES FIRE "DONTS"

SEASON FOR CONFLAGRATIONS IS HERE.

GOOD RECORD BROKEN

First Five Minutes of Blaze Is More Important Than Next Five Hours.

After two months of almost complete freedom from fires Maryville has broken its good record with several blazes recently.

This is the season of the year when fires are most prevalent and Bert Rowley, Maryville fire chief, has issued a list of "don'ts" which are designed to prevent fires and to cut down fire loss.

The annual fire loss amounted in 1924, to $4.90 for every man, woman and child in the United States, the fire chief explained, and added that fire fighters say that the first five minutes of a fire are more important than the next five hours.

Here are the "don'ts":

We owe it to our neighbor, as well as ourselves to make way with that fire hazard and to prevent all fires within our power.

Don't fail to repair that bad flue and clean others.

Don't build bonfires where they will endanger other property.

Don't throw down lighted matches or cigarettes.

When burning leaves and trash, be sure all fire is out before leaving it.

Don't let leaves accomulate in gutter and on roofs as they catch fire easily from sparks.

Don't fail to provide proper material to extinguish fires, while they are small.

"The fire department will gladly co-operate with all citizens to prevent or extinguish all fires, with help or advice such as we can render," Mr. Rowly said.

As Many Pay Taxes, But Total Is Less

Taxes are being paid by as many citizens but the total amount collected to date is not so large as at the corresponding period last year, according to Emmett Bartram, collector of Polk township.

The smaller total this year, Mr. Bartram points out, is at least partly due to the fact that the school levy in Maryville is 5 cents lower, which more than compensates for a 1-cent increase in the state levy and 2 cents in the county levy.

Turpin's Hearing Was Postponed

The hearing of Frank M. Turpin in probate court this afternoon was indefinitely postponed after a jury had been subpoened. Turpin was permitted to go to his home near Clearmont.

Turpin attacked John Burch of Clearmont last Saturday with a scoop shovel. A charge was made that Turpin was insane and the hearing was set for today. Several witnesses were subpoened and were here today for the hearing.

Man With $500 Bill Borrows $5; Leaves

Visitor Also Goes Away Without Paying Account At Hotel Here And In Burlington Junction.

Local authorities today are seeking a man with a scar on his cheek and a $500 bill.

The man with the scar, past middle age, appeared at the Linville Hotel Tuesday night, registered as J. W. Smith of Kansas City, and was given a room. He had meals at the hotel and remained until yesterday morning, when he left without thanking his hosts for their hospitality—and without paying his bill.

To make matters worse, the guest had presented a $500 bill to the night clerk, and on the strength of it had asked and been granted a loan of $5. When Creston Maul, day clerk, went to him yesterday and suggested that he would be glad to take the $500 bill to the bank and get change, the guest announced that he himself was going to the bank to "get some drafts" and that he would see about getting the change. He left, but not for the bank.

The same man is said to have eaten dinner at the Maple hotel in Burlington Junction on the night preceding his arrival here. He went away without paying for the meal and for some other purchases. He had left his baggage at the station but registered at the hotel as if he intended to stay all night. He did not borrow any money at Burlington Junction, so far as Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell has been able to learn.

Whether the $500 bill was genuine has not been determined.

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON DEAD

THE END TO DYNAMIC FIGURE IN AMERICAN POLITICS.

IN CONGRESS 50 YEARS

Famous As Speaker of House; Sheared of Power by Progressives; An Open Foe of Labor Leader.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 12.—Joseph Gurney Cannon, America's "Uncle Joe" for half a century, one of the nation's foremost statesman, died here shortly after noon today.

Death came quietly, in contrast to the dynamic, vital life of the man America knew and dearly loved.

The only semblance to the gaunt, bustling, fighting ex-speaker of the House of Representatives was the strong, bearded face. Cannon's body was racked by almost 91 years of strenuous life and weakened by a year of almost continuous illness, but he summoned up enough courage to smile just before the end came.

Elected in Grant's Term.

"Who's Who," the authority on biography, gives Joseph Gurney Cannon but a paragraph, a scant fifteen and one-half lines.

It states that he was born May 7, 1836; that his parents were Dr. Horace F. and Guilelma Hollingsworth Cannon; that he was admitted to the bar of Illinois in 1858 and began a seven years' career as a state's attorney in 1861; that he was married to Mary P. Reed of Canfield, O., in 1862; that he was elected to Congress in 1873 when Grant was President and stayed there with the exception of two years, for a full half-century, being Speaker of the House from 1908 to 1911 during four terms of Congress and being honored at the Republican National Convention in 1908 with fifty-eight votes for the Presidential nomination.

That and the fact that Danville, Ill., was his home town is all that "Who's Who" devotes to one of the most interesting, picturesque figures in the history of American public life.

Satisfactory to Him.

Probably "Uncle Joe" regarded that biography as the most satisfactory ever written. He once expressed himself on the subject of such things in words made forcible by the injection of characteristic language which was almost as famous as the long cigar which protruded from a corner of his mouth during most of his waking hours.

"Damn the article that is too fulsome on the one hand or too libelous on the other," he said among other things.

The files of any well-kept newspaper reference room will yield several bushels of both kinds, but he never rushed into print to deny or confirm anything said about him. Not even when he was caricatured and lampooned from one end of the country to the other, did he ever display anything but tolerant amusement.

Mr. Cannon was born a Quaker and named after a great Quaker leader, Joseph Gurney. When he was still a child his parents, traveling by covered wagon drawn by oxen over the old trail from Virginia west which today is a part of the Ocean-to-Ocean highway, settled in Annapolis, Parke County, Indiana.

His Father Drowns.

There Dr. Cannon practiced his profession in a little Quaker settlement and for many miles around until he met death in a swollen stream which he sought to cross on horseback because patients on the other side needed his attention.

Joseph, his three brothers and an equal number of girl cousins, who had been taken into the Cannon home had been attending a Quaker school at Bloomingdale, two miles away, and Mrs. Cannon now moved there that they might continue.

Joseph, like the others, worked hard when he was not in his classes.

"It was the only life any of us knew," he said. "It didn't seem hard because we had no more luxurious life with which to compare it."

From his reading in those long winter nights was born the desire to become a lawyer. When he came to an age when his life work was to be chosen he went to Cincinnati and studied law.

He hung out his shingle in Tuscola, Ill., and there his mother and his brother, William, joined him.

Between them the brothers had saved a little money. William persuaded the next older, Joseph, to join him in

PLANE ATTACK AT HERRIN, ILL.

ROADHOUSE SURVIVES DROPPING OF FOUR BOMBS.

ONLY ONE EXPLODES

Birger Gang Fired At Low Flying Machine With Rifles, But It Escaped.

Harrisburg, Ill., Nov. 12.—The first airplane bombing attack in southern Illinois in the vicious guerilla gang war about Herrin, was made today.

A single plane whirled over the roadhouse of Charles Birger, leader of the Birger faction, and three bombs were dropped. Only one exploded and this fell 100 yards from the roadhouse and did no damage.

Members of the Birger gang fired at the low flying airplane with rifles, machine guns and revolvers but it escaped.

Senators Approve Coolidge Position

Statement on World Court Yesterday at Kansas City Agrees With Views of Solons.

Washington, Nov. 12. — President Coolidge's repetition at Kansas City of earlier notice that the United States would join the World Court only with the reservations proposed by the Senate, was greeted here today by both pro-court and anti-court senators as representing the general Senate sentiment.

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, leading irreconcilable, declared the President's stand was "good as far as it went." He manifestly would have preferred a pronouncement of withdrawal of American moves for entrance into the court, although he admitted the Senate probably would not take steps to cancel the steps already taken.

Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, said: "Fortunately for the country, the President remains a sterling American."

Strike Conferences Are Suspended a Day

London, Nov. 12.—Conferences between the government and representatives of the miners to end the coal dispute which has kept most of the British coal miners idle since May 1 were suspended today until Saturday.

The suspension was to permit 150 members of the miners' delegates conference to study the government's explanation of certain points in the proposed peace formula.

The general situation apparently was favorable.

G. O. P. BEARS OLIVE BRANCH

"BAD BOY" SENATORS TO HAVE PLACES OF HONOR.

COMPLETE REVERSAL

Insurgents Who Once Were "Kicked Out," to Be Restored That Party May Keep Control.

Washington, Nov. 12.—A peace agreement with insurgents is being planned by Republican leaders here to end the factional war which started with the break of the late Senator Robert M. La Follette from the party ranks in the presidential camp of 1924.

The first step will be restoration of party rights to Senator Lynn Frazier, independent Republican, North Dakota, who was ousted with three others for participation in the La Follette movement.

The second step will be the installation of Senator George Norris, Republican, Nebraska, "the trust buster" as chairman of the all powerful judiciary committee.

The peace is a complete reversal of the action taken in 1925 when Frazier, the elder La Follette, now dead; Senators Ladd, Republican, North Dakota, and Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, were deprived of committee chairmanships and party privileges.

It was necessary in order to preserve the numerical superiority of the party in the next Senate.

Kansas City Gets Back to Normalcy

Visit of Both President Coolidge and Queen Marie Makes Gala Day—100,000 in Crowd.

Kansas City, Nov. 12.—This city settled back to normalcy today following its great Armistice Day celebration yesterday when President Coolidge dedicated the $2,000,000 war memorial in the forenoon and Queen Marie of Rumanian stopped for six hours in the evening.

Apparently the President was pleased with the throng of 100,000 persons who gathered to hear his address. During the ride to and from the memorial, Mr. Coolidge arose in his car and bowed in acknowledgement of the cheers that went up.

Most of the crowd that heard and saw the President and Mrs. Coolidge was on hand at the Union Station last night to greet the Rumanian royal party. The queen laid a wreath on the memorial, made a brief address, attended a musicale and left at midnight.

Mr. and Mrs. James Neal and Mrs. Gaylord Reynolds of Clearmont were in Maryville today.

QUEEN PLANS A HOME VISIT

MARIE MAY "DROP IN" ON A TYPICAL AMERICAN FAMILY.

SPENDS DAY IN QUIET

After Tumult Of Kansas City, Royal Visitor Is Content To See St. Louis From A Limousine.

Aboard Queen Marie's Special Train, in Missouri, Nov. 12.—If a charming and affable women swoops into your door unexpectedly some day, accompanied by a young girl and boy and a couple of foreign looking gentlemen, do not be surprised—it is probably Queen Marie, bent upon seeing the inside of an American home.

Friends of her majesty are considering just such a visit to allow the democratic queen of Rumania to obtain a genuine insight into a true American household. It is her desire, and theirs also, to see a homelike interior without the ostentation of a royal visit.

Knowing that if they announced a visit of this kind, the housekeeper would be spurred into renovating her house beyond its natural condition, members of the queen's party are planning a sudden raid upon an American home without notice.

"We could drop these official greeters for once," a member of the party, expexplained, "whisk her majesty up a residence street and stop at some typical American house. There we could knock on a door, 'say this is the Queen of Rumania,' and show her majesty what a typical American home is like."

The queen is said to be delighted with the idea and is looking ahead to a city where it can be carried out.

Last night the queen participated in Kansas City's Armistice Day celebration, begun earlier in the day by President Coolidge, who departed for Washington two hours before her majesty arrived.

The crowds were violent in attempting to show admiration for the queen. Policemen, tired of holding the crowds, excited earlier by the President's visit, let the people do as they pleased, almost causing the royal family to be blocked in their path.

Today her majesty and her party enjoyed a complete day of rest in St. Louis, except for a luncheon, a dinner and attendance at a horse show. The queen will spend the day in resting and seeing the city from the inside of a limousine.

Loie Fuller Denies Row.

St. Louis, Nov. 12.—There was no controversy between herself and members of Queen Marie's party, Loie Fuller said last night before leaving St. Louis for New York.

Miss Fuller left the queen's train at Denver coming here in a private car. With Miss Fuller was Mary Birkhead, secretary of Samuel Hill's Maryhill Washington museum.

Miss Birkhead likewise denied any discord with any members of the royal entourage and further said that she was not Miss Fuller's publicity agent.

"We are just friends," Miss Birkhead said.

Miss Fuller denied she had been asked to leave the Queen's party by Col. John H. Carroll.

French Parliament Is Convened Today

Paris, Nov. 12.—The French Parliament convened today after a recess of three months to pass the budget, but it was understood that other major financial problems—including war debts — would not be discussed this session.

Premier Poincare planned to prevent adverse criticism of his budget or of the financial decrees imposed by his coalition cabinet during the recess. Supported by the fact that the franc has appreciated almost 100 per cent since mid-summer. Poincare was to explain to the deputies that neither he nor the public would welcome speeches in the chamber which might weaken French currency and cause the beginning of another slump such as resulted in 1926.

Weather

Unsettled and warmer today; Saturday, unsettled and warmer, rain likely.

EDUCATION A CONCERN IN MISSOURI AND THE NATION.

The hundreds of Missouri teachers who are in Kansas City this week are concerned fundamentally with one thing, with a constant search for methods by which the schools of a great state may be turned to increasing account in the service of its youth and future citizenship. Missouri, like practically every other state, has its educational problems. Here they differ in degree more than in nature from those in other states. Missouri, particularly in recent years, has made considerable progess in building up the efficiency of its educational institutions of all grades. Its schools in some respects are neither better nor worse than those in most other parts of the country.

Missouri has shared in a national concern for education and enlightenment. Reviewing the progress of the country in this respect, since its founding, the United States commissioner of education, John J. Tigert, recently declared:

> In no other country in the world has such enthusiasm for education been manifested and such tremendious sums expended for common schools and higher institutions of learning as in America.

Yet education generally has much to accomplish. Before it are certain problems peculiar to no single state or region. Confronting the educational forces of the country still is the problem of millions of illiterates, together with the problem of bigotry, intolerance and narrow-mindedness on the part of many who are ignorant altogether and even those who have made some advances in what commonly is accepted as education.

Almost as great in importance is the urgent necessity of equalizing the opportunities of the schools in, by far, the larger number of the states. Until the country child as the city child, the member of this race as of that, the inhabitant of one state or section as of another, has a common advantage and privilege of training there can be no genuine democracy in education, perhaps none in the entire nation. Better trained teachers, better school buildings, better equipment and methods—all of these constantly are pressing for attention, in Missouri as elsewhere.

In this state just now there is a recognized necessity for adequate, dependable and permanent support for all of the educational institutions. There is a need of larger and more efficient school units in the various counties; for higher and uniform standards for teachers and for a definitely worked out educational program that will help to lift the state to a higher level in the training of its youth. There are matters for the teachers and educational leaders of Missouri, but they concern equally all the people of the state. For the advancement of education is a primary and essential task of the common wealth.—Kansas City Times.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

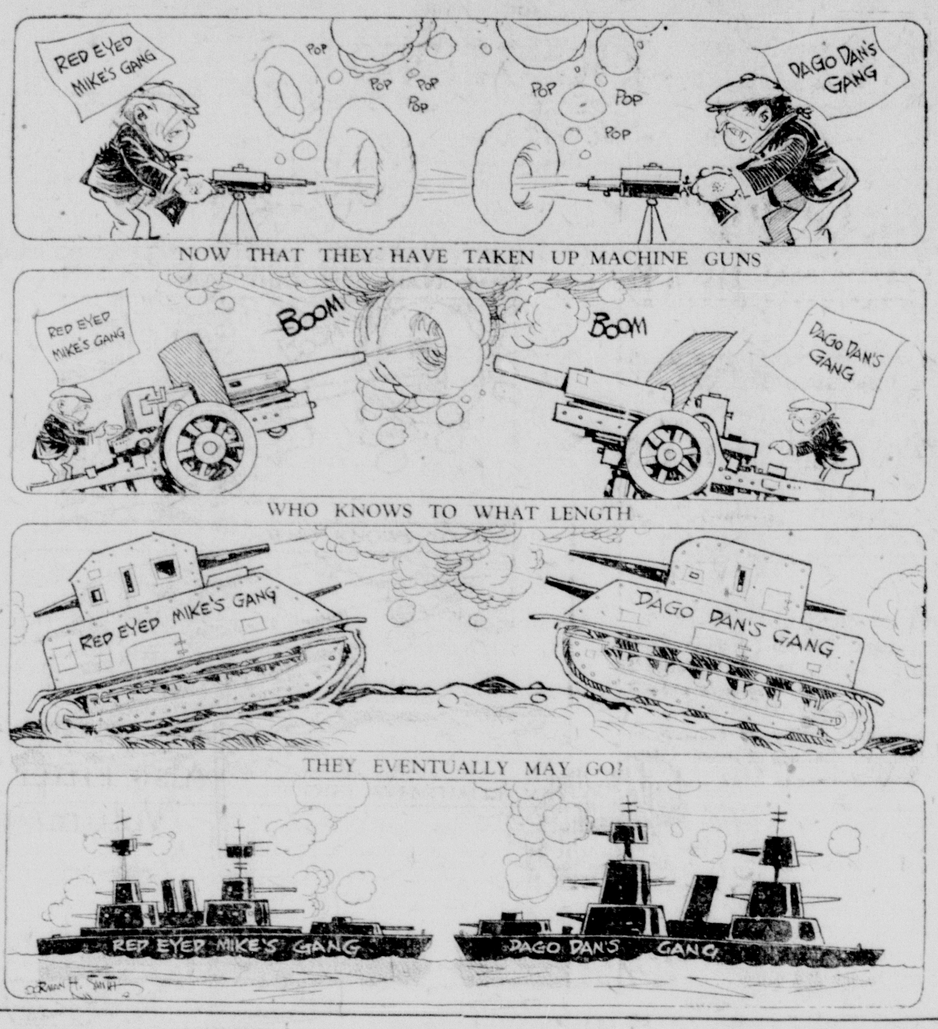
Washington—If the United States Senate refuses to seat William S. Vare and Frank L. Smith, as seems far more than likely, the organization—that is to say, the committee membership—of the upper house in the 70th Congress will be dictated by Senator Henrick Shipstead.

With Vare and Smith out of it, the Senate lineup will be: Democrats, 47. Republicans, 46. Farmer-Labor, 1.

The Farmer-Laborite is Shipstead.

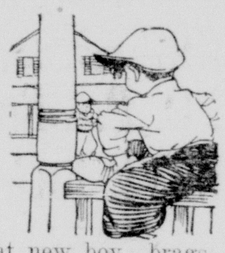
The Democrats will submit their list of committee candidates. The Republicans will submit theirs.

EVOLUTION.



Willie Willis

By ROBERT QUILLEN



"That new boy brags so much about his father! Why, my Papa could spit through his teeth when he wasn't but seven years old."

"Copyright, 1925. Pub's Syndicate."

The Democrats will cast 47 votes for theirs and if Shipstead votes with them that will cinch it. The Republicans will cast 46 votes for theirs and if Shipstead votes with them he'll make it a tie, which Vice President Dawes will break by voting with the Republicans.

The 46 Republicans include six irreconcilable Progressives, who will vote against the regulars on most propositions, but their precedent is to throw their strength to the latter on committee assignments.

Presumably they will do so on this coming occasion. This is assuming that the regulars' committee selections are reasonably acceptable to the insurgents, but it's safe to predict that they will be. The regulars will want their own organization. They'll realize that their only way of getting it is by at least semi-satisfying the insurgents—and also Senator Shipstead. So they will have to make concessions.

So will the Democrats. The Democrats have less insurgency in their ranks than the Republicans.

They will not have to make many concessions to insurgency in their own ranks, but must make them to Senator Shipstead. Otherwise he'll vote with the Republicans.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon Dead

starting a bank.

Foundation of Fortune.

Thus was laid the foundation of the fortune which made Mr. Cannon a millionaire, well able to indulge his love for politics.

His real career began with his election to the state's attorneyship of his county. Seven years in that office made of him a rampant, fire-eating political gladiator to whom a battle was the breath of life.

When Cannon decided to run for Congress he was elected by a landslide to which Democrats, normally in power in the district, long spoke of as "the crime of '72."

Thus began a service in the House of Representatives that was to total half a century and not be approached by any of his contemporaries.

In 1890 Mr. Cannon suffered his first defeat in the thirty-six years he had been running for Congress.

He was returned two years later, however, and by now he was "Uncle Joe"—not only to his home folks but to a nation at large.

In 1906 the American Federation of Labor, smarting under his frank opposition to an anti-injunction bill sponsored by Samuel Gompers, undertook to bring about his defeat.

In Spite of Gompers.

Characteristically, "Uncle Joe" carried the fight to the enemy. He invaded factories and shops, wherever large numbers of working men were to be found, shook a clenched fist at them and thundered:

"I am against Mr. Gompers and his anti-injunction bill. It is a bad bill. If you want it anyhow you had better elect someone else. I won't vote for it. I'll see Mr. Gompers there and back first."

When the votes were counted he not only had beaten his nearest rival two to one, but he had carried the home town of the Federation's candidate.

Already, though, ramblings over his dominance of the House were being heard, the term "progressive" was coming into use as opposed to the "stand-patter" class to which Mr. Cannon belonged. In 1915 it boiled over and a combination of the Republican minority and the Democrats stripped the speaker of the power which formerly had been attached to the chair.

Refused to Go Limit.

Yet, having sheared him, his shearers refused to go to the limit and oust him from the chair.

The next year Mr. Cannon was caught in the political upheaval and failed of re-election, but the following session he was back again—to stay until he came home in 1923 for good.

His later years in Congress—he was in his eighties when elected the last time—were not markedly active. He, himself, when finally he decided to retire said: "All I was good for at the last session was to form a quorum."

Back home in Danville he seemed to lose some of his amazing vitality. Every day, however, he paid a visit to the Second National Bank—the "Cannon bank"—and every week he attended the sessions of the Kiwanis Club.

Suffers Bad Fall.

Then came the accident that marked the beginning of the end. He fell on a coal pile in the basement of his home and broke his arm. It put him in bed for some time and when he emerged again it was plain to see he was beginning to fail.

Rumors that he was seriously ill were frequent, but denials that his ailments were more than trivial always followed. Nevertheless it became apparent shortly after Christmas, 1925, that the end rapidly was approaching.

Perhaps no surprise "Uncle Joe" ever sprung on the public was quite as great as that of 1924 when, at 89, he joined the Methodist Church. St. James, across the street, attracted him. Mrs. Cannon had been an ardent worker there up to her death, in 1889—before he reached the heights.

"Had It Out With God."

It was over that same wife that young Joseph Cannon had finally broken many years before with the austere Quakers to which his family had belonged. Mary Reed, his sweetheart, had not been a Quaker yet he had married her and he refused to yield to the Quakers' demand that he say he was sorry he had done so.

"Uncle Joe" was quite aware of the surprise with which his joining the church was received. He even commented on it.

"People will say that a man who has the reputation for swearing that I have can't be sincere in joining the church," he said. "But I am. I know swearing is a bad habit; a mighty bad habit. But I've been doing it since I was a boy. I can't seem to stop it now. Still, I've had it out with God. He knows I wouldn't damn a mouse; that my swearing doesn't mean anything and that it does no one harm."

Fitch
Takes The Sham Out of Shampoo

OH, BOY! There's a delightful, refreshing, cleansing kick in a FITCH SHAMPOO! The Fitch Shampoo dissolves and removes from the very first application every particle of dandruff and foreign matter, leaving the scalp clean and healthy and the hair soft and fluffy.

The tonic in the Fitch Shampoo actually penetrates into every hair follicle, thereby invigorating the growth of hair. The lather is then gradually created by the application of water and, when rubbed out and rinsed, the lather carries with it all dirt, dandruff and foreign matter, leaving every pore open and functioning as nature intended.

AFTER THE SHAMPOO, there is a FITCH TONIC for every hair and scalp condition. If the scalp has been sore and blotchy, use FITCH'S IDEAL. If your hair is inclined to be oily, use FITCH'S QUININE or FITCH'S TONIQUE SUPERBE. (Both are astringent and antiseptic.) If you want the hair to lie in place, use FITCH'S LA FOMA.

Write to the F. W. Fitch Co., Des Moines, Ia., for free trial bottle of any of these preparations.

John Montieth of St. Louis was appointed to fill the vacancy.

Do You Really Save By Cutting Down On Cleaning Bills?

Garments that day after day gather in the dust, take on spots and are not cleaned lose much of their wearing service. The usual dirt that a garment collects tends to rot the fabric and when you do finally send your garment to the cleaner you find that where the most dirt has accumulated the weave begins to break. At this time of year when there is soot and dust in the air you should have your apparel cleaned often.

Organization Work of Ellison Lauded

Yesterday's St. Louis Globe-Democrat commented on the outstate organization of the Democratic party in Missouri, which was in charge of George R. Ellison of Maryville. The Globe-Democrat had, in part, the following:

"George R. Ellison of Maryville, member of the State Committee and influential Northwest Missouri lawyer, was made director of organization at state headquarters.

"Ellison, building upon the work already started, threw together a seemingly effective organization in nearly every community of the state. That Democrats polled a greater percentage of their vote in rural Missouri than did the Republicans indicates the effectiveness of the Democratic outstate organization work."

It Still Rings

—NEA, San Francisco Bureau.
Not a night in 150 years has this bell failed to sound for "De Profundus" at Mission Santa Clara, in California. It and two others were given to the mission by the King of Spain with the injunction that they be rung daily at 8:30 p. m. The rude support for the bell pictured here was rigged up recently when the mission was destroyed by fire.

This and That

"The queen is the real thing—she's a sure-enough queen," declared Dr. H. L. Stinson, who went to Kansas City to see the President and the queen. Doctor Stinson said he was too heavy to be lifted up with the other children to kiss the queen. Another argument in favor of reducing.

Thesounding of the siren and the ringing of bells in Maryville, yesterday, marked the 11 o'clock hour of Armistice.

Prof. L. L. St. Clair of the Maryville High School, telephoned from Kansas City last night, where he is attending the teachers' meeting, to learn the score from the Maryville-Albany football game.

BEEF MEET AT GRAIN VALLEY

J. ROSS FLEETWOOD URGES FARMERS TO ATTEND.

AT SNI-A-BAR, NOV. 22

Program Is Given; Results of Series of Experiments To Be Shown.

"Several years ago a herd of beef cows was considered one of the very best investments on Nodaway County farms," declared J. Ross Fleetwood, county agent, today. "The farmer who could boast of a good herd of cows could always depend on getting any amount of credit he needed at the bank." However, Fleetwood explained, since the market demands have changed and most western cattle are sold as calves or yearlings, a great number of these same farmers have questioned whether they could afford to raise calves in competition with the western range cattleman, with his unlimited supply of cheap grazing land.

"The United States Department of Agriculture, the Missouri College and Sni-A-Bar farms have been co-operating for two years in a series of experiments or demonstrations on methods of handling calves on corn belt farms," the county agent said, and he added, "They have secured results which show that even now it is highly profitable to keep a good herd of beef cows if the calves are properly managed.

"On Monday, November 22, at 1:30 p. m., at Sni-A-Bar Farm, Grain Valley, Mo., there is to be a public meeting to see the demonstration and discuss the results secured.

"The experiment includes five lots of calves, all dropped last spring and which have been nursing their mothers since that time."

They are:

Lot 1. Steer calves nursed their mothers and have had no grain.

Lot 2. Steer calves, nursed their mothers and were self-fed grain in creep located in pasture.

Lot 3. Steer calves, separated from mothers but allowed to nurse twice daily and fed all the grain they would eat.

Lot 4. Steer calves, ran with their mothers on pasture without grain until about 30 days ago.

Lot 5. Heifer calves, about the same age as the steers and self-fed in a creep through the summer.

The program is as follows:

1:30 p. m.—Cattle Improvement at Sni-A-Bar Farm, W. A. Cochel.

1:45 p. m.—What the Market Wants in Beef, J. C. Swift.

2:00 p. m.—Cost of Raising Calves on the Range, W. H. Block.

2:15 p. m.—Summary of 1925 Sni-A-Bar Cattle Feeding Experiment, H. M. Gorlock.

2:30 p. m.—Review of 1926 Experimental Data and Plans for the Coming Winter's Work, E. A. Trowbridge, Gorlock.

3:00 p. m.—Visit to Cattle Lot and Inspection of Cattle.

"This meeting should furnish a good place to secure information which should be of interest to anyone interested in cattle feeding and calf feeding in particular. I hope that a number of farmers from here can plan to attend the meeting," Fleetwood said.

Miss Margaret Foster, Granddaughter of Mrs. W. T. Garrett Is Business Success.

The Des Moines, Ia., Capital of last Saturday's issue contained a likeness of Miss Margaret Foster of Des Moines, a granddaughter of Mrs. W. T. Garrett of Maryville, and a frequent visitor here. A feature story under the caption, "The Business World Calls Society Women," included the following excerpt concerning Miss Foster:

Miss Margaret Foster is another local woman who is recognized in the world of business. Finishing her college work at Drake University, where she was a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, Miss Foster opened a gift shop which has become extremely popular. Her talent for managing the sorority parties, and her excellent taste in regard to bazaars, table decorations and novel favors may have had something to do with Miss Foster's starting in business.

Cuts Gas Bill in Half

Low first cost is only part of your saving on an Overland Whippet.

Its outstanding economy of 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline—well over 1,000 miles on a gallon of oil—with the smallest tax rating of any car in America today, cuts present operating costs just about in half. And doubles the value of every dollar you now spend for upkeep.

In a recent economy driving test in Chicago 1308 contestants averaged 31.8 miles per gallon—the winner averaged 47.2 miles per gallon. And scores of Whippets were sold as the result of this demonstration.
In fairness to yourself, think of economy before buying any light car today.

What Nodaway County Churches Are Doing

LET CALEB DO IT

Comment on the Uniform International Sunday School Lesson for November 14, 1926.
Read Joshua 14.

Wm. Southern, Jr.

A famous building dating back to Roman times, used as a Roman church and now known as the Baptistry, or Church of S. Giovanni, stands in Florence. Three bronze doors in this temple are celebrated in the history of fine arts. Depicted in bronze, set in panels exactly like we made serial pictures now, are Bible stories.

The third door, facing the great cathedral is the work of Lorenzo Ghiberti and dated in the 14th century. It is divided into ten compartments telling the story of the creation and illustrating ten great Bible events.

The eighth of these panels is a picture of the taking of Jericho by Joshua. In the early centuries of Christianity the people were very close to the beginning of the Christian era and the events of the Bible were entirely literal and real. The picture in bronze shows the walled city of Jercho, towrs and the houses on the walls. Below in the plain are the tents of the Israelites. Marching about the walls are the forces of Joshua, trumpeters in bronze so lifelike that you may almost hear the sounds of the bugles. Immediately following come priests carrying the ark and then a long line of men solemnly marching according to orders about the walls. The figures on the walls are seen looking down on this puny procession, waving hands in derision and so perfect is the work, that one may easily imagine the jibes and ridicule from the Jericho behind the walls.

Looking at this picture I thought of Caleb. I imagined that I could pick him out from among the men carrying the ark, a long-bearded, vigorous man, older than the others. This was about where Caleb would be, at the hardest part of the job.

Caleb was one of those rare men upon whom everybody depended. If anything difficult was to be done it was "Let Caleb do it." Caleb was always on the job and when a duty was assigned to him nobody worried, for Caleb would always be there. This was true from the first time we met Caleb when he was one of the princes selected 38 years previous to the taking of Jericho to take his life in his hands and spy out the land. He was one of two. Joshua was the other, who urged the Israelites to go in and fight the giants and take the land.

From that time until Joshua had accomplished the conquest of a good part of Canaan and had divided up the land amongst the tribes, Caleb is always found at the front in the hard places, ready for any job. He was not a brilliant man, he was not a great leader. He was one of those rare men always on the job, always dependable and always ready to do his share and then help out the other fellow. We need the Calebs, sometimes I think, more than we need the brilliant Joshuas. Caleb was the kind of a man who never forgot an order, never doubted or questioned. Caleb took God at his word. He always held up his end and never quit. If Israel had taken a vote to determine who was the most useful man in camp I think Caleb would have been selected.

In every city and community there is a man of this kind. He is not found wearing the blazing badges on his breast and walking at the head of the procession. He is the man who has attended to the hard work and made success possible.

Caleb was not born Israelite, he was a Kenezite. For a long time I thought that only the Israelites had a part in the forty years struggle in the wilderness. It never occurred to me that when Abraham left Ur he had any following except his own family and their retainers. Abraham probably was followed from Ur by thousansd of people, all seeking new ventures under the inspiration of a new religion. When Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt thousands of Egyptians probably went with them. On their way through the desert, when they camped and when they fought, men and women from the tribes nearby joined them and became citizens.

Caleb was forty years old when he went as a spy into the new land. He joined Joshua in urging that it be taken at once, but was overruled by the other ten who were scared. It was then that Caleb was promised a rich portion in the new country. For 38 years he bore the burdens of the desert uncomplainingly.

CALEB'S FAITHFULNESS REWARDED.

Lesson Text.—Josh. 14: 6-15.

6. Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in Gilgal: and Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite said unto him, Thou knowest the thing that the Lord said unto Moses the man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea.

7. Forty years old was I when Moses the servant of the Lord sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart.

8. Nevertheless my brethern that went up with me made the heart of the people melt: but I wholly followed the Lord my God.

9. And Moses sware on that day, saying, Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the Lord my God.

10. And now, behold, the Lord hath kept me alive, as He said, these forty and five years, even since the Lord spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel wandered in the wilderness: and now, low, I am this day fourscore and five years old.

11. And yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength now, for war, both to go out and to come in.

12. Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the Lord spake in that day; for thou heardest in that day how the Anakim were there, and that the cities were great and fenced: if so be the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able to drive them out, as the Lord said.

13. And Joshua blessed him and gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance.

14. Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite unto this day; because that he wholly followed the Lord God of Israel.

15. And the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba; which Arba was a great man among the Anakim. And the land had rest from war.

Time—1445 B. C. Place—Gilgal.

Golden Text.—I wholly followed the Lord my God.—Josh. 14:8.

Then for five years he was the trusted lieutenant of Joshua and never missed a fight. He did not complain about his hard lot. When Joshua was selected as the leader, Caleb congratulated him and did his very best to make his leadership successful. He might easily have objected. He was an elder man than Joshua and just as experienced. He had served alongside of Joshua for forty years.

When Caleb was 85 years old he did not set up the claim to an old age pension and ask to be retired. There was, for the time, peace in the land and Caleb sought out his commander and suggested that the time had come for another job. He pointed out the country of Hebron where the giants lived and said that if Joshua would give this land to him he would take his regiment and run those giants into the river and make his home there.

Caleb's argument is worth reading. He admitted that he was 85 years old but said he was as good a man as when he was forty. He reminded Joshua of his capacity for a fight and said "As yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day when Moses sent me." He might have made his claim on the ground of past services, he might have claimed that he was too old to work and should be rewarded with a soft job. He did none of these things. He asked for the privilege of leading a hard fight against a bunch of giants.

Caleb had the kind of faith which never faltered. He had God's promise and never doubted. As year after year went by until he had been on the weary road for forty years and saw no promise of his reward, he never gave up. When he laid his case before Joshua and reminded his leader of the promise he proudly said "I have wholly followed Jehovah my God." It is a great thing to be able to say truly. Few of us follow God wholly. We stray off here and there, we get weak in the knees, we do things we know we should not do and we do not take God at his word.

There is in the Bible, in the long story of God's dealing with men, the promise written at every station. God promises us Hebron if we will only do our part.

I would like to have the faith which would never stagger. Many times we are told not to worry. If we had the proper faith, if we would just take God at his word we need never worry about the results.

I do not mean the ordinary worries we all have. I do not mean that a man or woman should never plan and think and worry, if you please, about what to do and how to do it. We are poor sticks if we do not anticipate and plan and work. I do not believe we accomplish great things unless we give great service and great planning and great courage. I mean, do not doubt that God will always keep his promise.

When you read this lay aside the paper for a moment and figure out who is the most valuable man in your community.

You will decide on Caleb, the man who was always on his job, who was always reliable and dependable and who believed God's promises and accepted them at face value.

HOW WE GOT OUR BIBLE

By the Rev. William N. Dewar, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

We saw last week that the "Great Bible," published in 1539, received the sanction of the King and the Bishops and was widely read throughout the realm of Britain.

The next version to appear was published in Geneva in 1560 and is known as the "Genevan Bible." The Genevan New Testament was the work of Whittingham and appeared in 1557. This version is noteworthy because it was the first Bible in which the text was divided into verses in accord with the example of the Greek New Testament issued by Stevens in the year 1551. The Genevan Version was later revised from revionx translations and references to the Hebrew Text. The men responsible for this addition were Whittingham, Coverdale, and John Knox. The Genevan Version was a greater improvement on previous Versions and was printed in convenient form, in Toman type. During the reign of Elizabeth when the reign of protestantism was restored there was no barrier to the publication of the Bible into the English tongue and the Genevan Version became very popular. During a period of eighty-four years it ran through one hundred and forty editions. In scholarship and literary style the Genevan Bible was superior to all other versions, but it did not satisfy the Bishops. They, therefore determined on a translation of a version of their own. The Bishops led by Archbishop Parker set to work and produced a revision known as the "Bishops Bible." It is a good version but greatly inferior to the Genevan and never had much vogue. Its place in history is relatively unimportant.

Between the years 1582 and 1609, a Catholic version of the Bible appeared known as the Rheims-Douay Bible. It was produced during a Protestant ascendency when the Catholics were being persecuted and had taken refuge in the city of Rheims. A Catholic colony was founded at Rheims and its members brought out a copy of the Bible based on the Latin, the Greek, and divers other versions. In the English College of Rheims the leader of the enterprise was Cardinal Allen. But the Rheims New Testament was the work of an Oxford Scholar named Gregory Martin. This version was based on the Vulgate. The complete Bible was issued at Douay in 1609, hence, it is commonly called the Douay Bible. It is an excellent version and had considerable influence in the creation of the version of 1611, known as the "Authorized or King James Version."

This latter version is the most important of all the version of the Bible published in the English language. On the death of Queen Elizabeth, King James V. of Scotland became heir to the English crown. He was henceforth to rule over a united Kingdom and took the title James I. King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland. On his way from Edinburgh to London to take possession of his Kingdom he was met by a delegation of Puritan Clergy who presented to him what is known as the "Millenary Petition." This petition was a statement of the certain grievances under which the Puritan Clergy were suffering and a request that they might be redressed. The King was no Puritan but he gave this word that attention would be given to the petition at a later time.

The King kept his promise by calling a conference at which the petition was discussed. The result of the discussion was a disappointment to the puritans. Their request was denied, and many of them were driven to seek refuge from persecution in Holland. From Holland they emigrated to America and founded the first American commonwealth.

The one thing of great significance that transpired at the Conference for the discussion of the "Millenary Petition" was the suggestion by a Puritan, Dr. Reynolds, that a new translation of the Bible be made. The suggestion was not received with favor by the Bishops, and Bancroft, the Bishop of London, sneering, remarked "that if every man had his humor

DRAMATIC EVENTS IN BIBLE HISTORY : : By Harlowe R. Hoyt and Walter Scott

The Conquest of Canaan

When Jericho fell, many Canaanites made peace with the Israelites. But the people of Gibeon tricked Joshua by sending tagged messengers, who had little food and weary animals, who pretended they had come from a lay far away. Joshua made a generous treaty. Two days later, when they reached the city, the Israelites discovered the trickery. So they forced the Gibeonites to work for them without pay.
When Canaan was conquered, the country was divided among the twelve tribes of Israel. Many years before, Moses had promised Hebron to Caleb, one of the faithful spies. Because of his faithful service, Joshua fulfilled the promis and blessed Caleb, the steadfast.
Three years passed and Joshua assembled the Israelites at Schechem. He recalled the story of their wanderings, and warned them against idolatry. Then he renewed the covenant with them and erected a stone, to remind them to be true to Jehovah.

JUDITH MARTIN, teaching her first year at Pendleton University, is kissed by ERIC WATERS, on a bet.

DR. PETER DORN also seeks her acquaintance.

MYRA ALDRICH, living at Judith's boarding house, learns that Eric, with whom she is in love, has kissed Judith and breaks off friendly relations with her.

Escaping from a dull faculty tea, Judith hikes into the country with Eric and dines at a roadhouse. It is raided and they escape in a rainstorm to a cabin where Judith is to spend the night, while Eric walks back to town.

Next morning Eric returns with his car, bringing fresh clothing for Judith, which he has asked Myra to pack for him. She reproaches him for telling Myra of the escapade.

The following night, when Judith returns from the movies with Will Wetherel, Will warns her to be careful of Myra.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XII.

"What do you mean?" asked Judith in a voice that attempted to be casual but shook, in spite of her. "I don't know what I have to fear from Myra."

Wetherel peered at her in the shadow of the campus trees. "She's fighting mad at you for snatching Eric, and she doesn't fight fair—in a case like that, any more than any other woman does."

Judith was silent. Wetherel rattled on. He had dropped the subject of Myra and returned to his favorite topic, himself.

"Who's that on your front steps?" he asked, as they turned in at the Stedway walk. A man and a girl were sitting on the porch steps.

"Just us," called Myra's shrilly sweet voice. "And this is Dr. Dorn. I think you both know him. We've had the most gorgeous session at the observatory."

"And we've had a session with Pola Negri," cried Will.

Dr. Dorn was looking at Judith. "It's a pity Miss Martin was too tired to come. It was a good telescope evening—no moon and no clouds. The rings of Saturn and the red spot on Mars were clearly visible. But perhaps she found the movies less fatiguing."

Judith had no chance to reply, for Myra spoke, a little too glibly. "Yes, Judith, you'd have loved it." She turned to the professor. "But you must excuse her. She must be very tired. You, see, she didn't come home last night."

For a moment, nobody said anything, but Judith thought she heard Will whistle faintly.

"Yes," said Dr. Dorn, "one never sleeps so well away from home." His voice was casual.

Wetherel put his hand on Judith's arm and led her up the steps and into the house.

"Wow!" he exclaimed, when the door had shut behind them. "What'd I tell you about that little hellcat? Holy mackerel, that was a hot shot! Before his nibs, the professor, too. She was hinting at the schooner today, that there were things she could tell, if she would! But I didn't think she's go so far as that."

Judith spoke cautiously. "What do you mean, Will?"

Wetherel was obviously trying to read her face. "Look here, Judy. You can't fool me. I know what she meant when she said you didn't come home last night. Anyone but an unworldly sap like Dorn would have caught it. Lucky for you he didn't."

"After all, Will," said Judith, coldly, "it depends on what kind of mind you have, whether Myra's speech was an insult or not. I must say I prefer the mind of 'an unworldly sap' to one like yours. Better scrub it up a bit before you go to bed."

Wetherel leaned against the newel post, looking at her. Now he smiled and held out his hand. "It's all right, Judy. You know I'm for you. But watch Myra Aldrich. This is only a sample of her tactics, with the main campaign to follow. Guess I'll toddle along now. My bedtime. Good night.

"Miss Martin—please call Mr. Waters, Red 311," said a note on the Stedway telephone pad when Judith came home next day.

She paused by the telephone, and after a moment of indecision called the number.

Eric's voice was debonair. "Hello, Jude. What say dinner at the Sigma Psi house tonight? Clean napkin night. Everybody asking guests.

"Eve's staging a banjo hike by moonlight to Lover's Leap afterwards. Thought we might like to trot along, see the harvest moon rise, and sob a few sobs to Wetherel's ukulele. Is it a go?"

Across the hall a wavy mirror in the hatrack showed Judith her reflection. Her face was smudged and there were drooping lines about her mouth.

She turned back to the phone. "I'll come, Eric. I've had enough of stress and strife this week, and I'd like to be gay for a little while."

"Right-o! You'll enjoy the Lover's Leap jaunt. All sentimental souls do. Better stick some oxfords in your pocket for the hike."

Judith went up stairs with a lighter step. Near the top of the flight, she started back against the wall. Myra was standing against the railing above. She tossed her head when she saw Judith. "I'd like my week-end bag, please," she said sullenly.

Judith ushered her into her room. Myra stood stiffly by the table while the bag was being dragged out of the closet. "When Eric asked me to pack your clothes, I couldn't find any bag of yours so I had to send mine," she continued.

Judith handed her the bag. "Thank you very much, Myra." She turned away to the dresser. It seemed to her that Myra lingered a moment by the table, on the verge of speaking. Then she heard the door slam.

It had been many days since Judith had had time for a really elaborate toilet. She spent two hours over her dressing tonight, luxuriating in the warm bath and the fragrant creams and powders that stood on her dressing table. She brushed her hair until it gleamed, and rubbed a piece of ice over her face to bring back the color that the day's fatigue had stolen.

At six o'clock she was slipping into a dress of sapphire blue, and kicking off the mules that were to be replaced by the high-heeled satin slippers that lay on the bed.

When Eric gave the Sigma Psi whistle under her window, she was wrapping a pair of walking shoes in heavy paper.

She found him standing at the foot of the stairs, his blond head hatless and rumpled by the wind, and his face uplifted.

"Hurry up run; like everything," he cried, and she tossed the walking shoes down for him to catch.

The fraternity house was ablaze with lights when they drove up the driveway under its hospitable pillars. They could hear laughter and syncopation from a phonograph as they ran up the steps. "I wish I had gone to a school where there were sororities," she said. "These Greek letter frats at least mean comfort and social graces—big fireplaces and grand pianos, in place of boarding house parlors."

Eric nodded. "We have pretty good parties now and then. Hope this dinner won't be too tame. You're rather thrilling tonight, Jude, and I'd like to get all the credit coming. Hope you make the brothers' girls look like a parcel of frumps."

A freshman opened the door for them and Judith found herself in a great square hall filled with young men in dinner coats, talking, smoking and wandering about. Heels tapping in the Charleston sounded from a little morning room which evidently housed the drunken victrola.

Someone dashed off with her wraps to the chaperone's room, and Eric led her into the living room. The hush that fell upon groups as her blue and copper glory passed was flattering.

A youngster in a flame-colored dress brought her heels abruptly to earth from the transport of a wild clog dance on the hearthstone. Judith recognized her as a member of her freshman English class. There were other co-eds ensconced here and there about the room, in deep chairs and divans. They looked at Judith curiously when the dancer cast an embarrassed glance in her direction.

"Keep it up, Connie," called Eric. "Judy isn't a schoolmarm tonight. She's just a sweetheart of Sigma Psi." Judith blushed under the shout of approval that went up from the men.

A familiar head seen over the back of a big armchair turned, and Judith saw Dr. Peter Dorn staring at her.

"There's your friend, the professor," said Eric, in a low tone. "He's an alumnus of our frat and faculty patron too. Pity he hasn't sense enough to turn down duty invitations to dinner."

"I don't think much of that kind of hospitality, Eric," said Judith shortly.

The white-haired Dresden china chaperone of the Sigma Psi house came down the stairs with mincing steps, and the guests were brought one by one to be presented to her.

Judith was standing by the little old lady when the gong sounded from the dining room. The president of the chapter gave the chaperone his arm and Judith followed with Eric to the larger of two long tables shining with silver and white linen.

The pale, miserable freshman who held Judith's chair pushed it against her knees too soon, so that she sat down suddenly, before the fraternity grace had been sung.

She giggled spontaneously and everyone else laughed with her, save Eric and the luckless freshman, whose glances locked for a long moment before the poor wretch escaped to answer a jangling telephone.

"Shame, Eric," whispered Judith. "He didn't mean to do it."

"Awkward lout," rejoined Eric. "Its time he got some manners."

Dr. Dorn, across the table, was listening, his eyes bent on Judith. She seemed almost visibly to avoid him. But Connie, the dancing freshman, was making up for Judith's neglect by embarrassing him with attentions.

"Connie's trying to vamp a passing grade in astronomy out of old Dorn," said Eric.

The chaperone's thin voice broke in. "Do tell us about the dean's plans. Professr Dorn. Isn't he going to follow up his coup of last night and clear out all the other unsavory places around Pendleton?"

Judith looked up quickly, her breath catching in her throat.

The old woman went on. "I have always felt that that roadhouse was one of the greatest blots on the town. I am sure none of my boys ever go there. What a relief to know that the place is to be closed at last!" Her white head nodded uncautiously.

Dr. Dorn seemed uncomfortable. "The place did no good, I daresay," he began, when Will Wetherel came through the folding doors and made for a vacant place at the other table.

"Well, well, Judith, Welcome to our board. Hear you're going hiking with us after while." His voice carried to the corners of the room.

"Eve's sore as thunder. Old Brown closed up the Blue Moon, just when she was planning to wind up her party there tonight with a feed."

(To Be Continued)

Wetherel has a habit of putting his foot in it. High adventure is in store for Judith on the moonlight hike.

PRECEPTS THAT GUIDE A WEALTHY MAN

Don't Worry, Keep Weight Normal, Drink Plenty of Water, Exercise Daily and Sleep in Fresh Air to Lengthen Years.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A few weeks ago the richest man in the world had a birthday. John D. Rockefeller Sr., was eighty-seven years of age on July 8.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

This doesn't seem to be an extreme age to me, because my father is in good health in his eighty-ninth year, and I have an uncle who celebrated his hundred and first birthday in June. After all, however, to be vigorous and active at eighty-seven is an achievement. It speaks well for the care Mr. Rockefeller has taken of himself through these many years.

It must be admitted that during the past thirty years Mr. Rockefeller hasn't worked very hard. During that time he has given himself out-of-door life almost every day of the year. He is said to be stronger and happier now than he was when he was sixty.

Mr. Rockefeller's physician is a lifetime friend of mine. In 1916 Dr. H. F. Biggar, of whom I speak, prepared some rules for his patient. I understand Mr. Rockefeller has not failed to follow Dr. Biggar's instructions. Undoubtedly his willingness to submit to regulation has had much to do with his good health and continued life.

If you were as rich as Mr. Rockefeller, being worth a couple of billions or thereabouts, perhaps you wouldn't need Dr. Biggar's first rule. "Don't worry," is the first in the list of things you must or must not do in order to reach a hundred.

Money does not keep people from worrying. Some of the worst worriers I ever knew were the richest men and women of my acquaintance. It isn't poor people alone who worry. There is an old saying:

"Those who have money are troubled about it.

"Those who have none are troubled without it."

To keep the wolf from the door is too often a cause of great anxiety and worry. To know what to do in a business deal and how to invest a million dollars may be just as worrisome. All these things are relative. You can worry if you are rich and worry if you are poor. If you have confidence in God and faith in yourself you don't need to worry whether you are rich or poor.

Dr. Biggar is right in putting worry first. I don't believe anybody can be happy or look forward to a reasonable expectation of life if he worries all the time.

St. Matthew said in his Gospel:

"Which of you by taking thought can all one cubit unto his stature?

"And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin."

If we read Matthew's Gospel in the right spirit we will understand what he meant when he said:

"Therefore take no though, saying: What shall we eat? or, what shall we drink? or, wherewithal shall we be clothed?"

This does not mean, of course, that there shall be no sensible attention to the needs of the body, but it does indicate that it is unchristian and irreligious to indulge in unavailing anxiety regarding what tomorrow shall bring forth.

Dr. Biggar's second rule is: "Don't acquire overweight."

The great trouble about overweight is that the victim permitted himself to become too heavy. It is almost impossible to take off weight when once it has been acquired. The important thing is to live such a manner of life that the weight is kept down.

Further rules are: "Drink three quarts of water every day; exercise daily; sleep in the fresh air."

It is because Mr. Rockefeller has followed these simple sules that he has prospered physically. It will be well for the rest of us to follow Dr. Biggar's advice.

Answers To Health Queries.

Miss S. W. Q.—Three weeks ago my right heel began to pain and swell so that it was impossible to walk. I strapped the foot for a week, but the trouble still persists. What do you advise?

A.—This trouble may be due to fallen arches. It might be advisable for you to consult an orthopedist. Perhaps he will suggest the wearing of supports.

10-Year-Old Boy No Teeth; Eats Steak

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Nov. 12.—Although he hasn't a single tooth in his mouth—never has had and never will, physicians say—Irwin Kearbey, 10-year-old boy living near here can relish a tough beefsteak, eat taffy candy and masticate other foods that try the talents of a sharp-toothed person.

Irwin's case is not an unusual one for his family. A brother, Lester, who lived until he was 14 years old, failed to grow any teeth as did a cousin, William Clark.

Irwin is a normal boy in every other respect and is an excellent student, his teachers say.

HOW WE GOT OUR BIBLE

about new versions, there would be no end of translations." But James I. was of an different mind. The suggestion pleased him, and he showed a lively interest in the proposal. James, who had some zeal for learning and literature, determined that a new translation should be made. This determination was carried out and in 1604 fifty-four learned men were chosen and appointed to the work. The choice of these men was made without regard to party and the choice revealed great wisdom on the part of the King. The group was made up of the most scholarly men of the age in their own line of study.

The translators were divided into six companies. Two sitting at Westminster (London), two at Oxford, and two at Cambridge Universities. A portion of the Bible was allotted to each group. As soon as each portion was translated it was sent to the other groups for corrections and suggestions. After the whole work was completed it passed through a final revision at the hands of twelve of the leading members of the company.

The entire work occupied two years and nine months, and all the previous editions of the Bible published were used in the translation. The aim of the revisers was not to produce a new translation but out of many good translations to make a better. They succeeded admirably in this commendable purpose. One writer says of the King James Versions of the Bible, "It has the fullness of the Bishop's Bible, the graceful vigor of the Genevan, the clearness of the Tindale, the grandeur of the Great Bible, the harmonies of the Coverdale, and the stately theological vocabulary of the Rheims." For scholarship and literary style one cannot speak too highly of the King James version. It is "The Great English Classic." No other book in any language has been printed so often and no other book has had so much influence in moulding the thought and life of so many peoples.

Since the publication of the King James version several notable versions have appeared which are worthy of mention.

In the interim between the King James and the appearance of our modern versions scholars were becoming better acquainted with the original languages of the Bible, and several new manuscripts, older than any used in the translation of the King James version, had been discovered. The most important of these manuscripts were the "Codex Sinaiticus," discovered by Tischendorf in a waste paper basket in a monastery on Mount Sinai, the "Codex Ephraemai," the "Codex Vaticanus," and the Codex Bezae" and the "Codex Alexandrinus." The discovery of the manuscripts named above made necessary, for the sake of greater accuracy and scholarship, a new translation. The results of this need were the English Revised version of 1881 and 1885, and the American Revised version of 1901. The latter is the finer version. The former being too scholarly and pedantic. It lacks literary grace and style. Neither will probably ever supplant the King James version in the favor of the people. The American Revised version although more accurate in translation it lacks literary charm.

In late years several versions in modern speech have appeared. The most noteworthy are "The Modern Speech New Testament," by Weymouth, "The New Testament," by James Moffat, and a new translation of the Bible in modern speech, by Goodspeed.

The end of the Bible's growth is not yet, and the final version is yet to be written.

Was a Good Judge of Liquor

"Since a young man I had liking for liquor and was considered a pretty good judge of it at one time, but constant drinking gave me stomach trouble which became chronic. My stomach would have been a valuable addition to a gas factory. Doctors did not seem to relieve me. One day my druggist got me to try MAYR'S, and I am now as good as new." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. All druggists.—Advertisement.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Grain prices went tumbling downward on the Chicago Board of Trade, bearish news bringing a landslide of selling orders.

Wheat closed 3 cents off on all deliveries. The foreign markets started the decline that turned into a near stampedo at the close.

The slight gain recently scored by corn was wiped out as this cereal went crashing to a new low on the crop, closing 1⅞ to 2 cents below yesterday.

Oats closed ⅝ to ¾ cent lower, with cash prices lower.

Heavy liquidations forced provisions to a lower close.

BUT A MULE IS STUBBORN

MARYVILLE FANS OVERLOOKED

HE WOULDN'T "WHOA"

Warrensburg Wins A Well-Earned 12-0 Victory, But There Is No Sting In Bearcats' Defeat.

All of Maryville shouted, "Woe to Warrensburg," but the Mules wouldn't whoa. They kicked their heils once and switched their tails twice, and the score was 12 to 0, a well-earned victory.

A touchdown in the second quarter and two field goals in the last period were the measure of victory—a victory which hoisted the championship banner of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association halfway up the Warrensburg flagpole.

The mules have yet one game to play, with Cape Girardeau. A victory in this game will give them a clean slate in the conference, and a defeat would mean that they would share championship honors, maybe. If Springfield defeats Kirksville today nothing can keep the Mules out of first place.

No Sting In Defeat.

There was no sting to the defeat yesterday. The Maryville team never halted in its effort to win the game. Never was there a let up, never did the Bearcats falter. But they were playing a better team, and they lost. That's the "sum total" of the facts. All hopes of a Maryville championship were lost in that game yesterday, but there was no bitterness after the game. There was glory in defeat.

One thing leaves a feeling or regret in the hearts of Maryville gridiron followers. And that is the fact that Capt. Dave Eads will nurse a badly-injured shoulder for some time. Several weeks ago the Bearcat leader's right shoulder was injured. The member healed rapidly, and it was thought that it would not bother him yesterday. But, sometime in the first half, it was injured again. Toward the end of the second quarter, Maryville started a passing attack. Eads started to do the passing. After two flips he relinquished the tossing to Berst, and when the umpire's whistle ended the semester he left the game for good.

The Captain's Last Game.

This was "Ikey" Eads' last conference game for Maryville. His toe has been a potent factor in Maryville's game for four years. His morale has been a greater factor. But he was unable to complete his last game.

"'Shorty,' I'm all done up," was "Ikey's'" comment. He was unable to play longer, but he insisted on being propped up on blankets near the side lines where he could watch the remainder of the game.

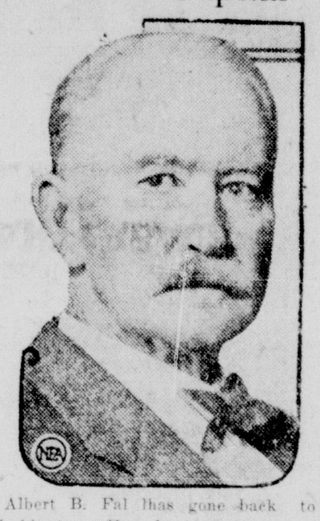
Maryville came close to scoring twice. In the first quarter the Bearcats worked the ball to the two-foot line and lost it on downs, and in the third period a pass from O'Banion was grounded over the Warrensburg goal line from the 13 yard line.

Roy Brown, flashy Mule half-back, scored the Warrensburg touchdown from the 5-yard line. His line opened a nice hole on Maryville's right side, and he dashed through for the marker. Whiteman failed to kick goal.

In the fourth quarter, Whiteman booted two pretty field goals, one from the 35-yard line, and one from the 20-yard line.

It seems unfair to speak of stars in the game yesterday. Both teams played as a team and not with individuality shining out. The Warrensburg backfield could pierce the Maryville line a little more easily, and Whiteman's long punts were a great help. He and Roy Brown shared honors for the Mules. Whiteman had a knack for hitting off tackle and Brown had a world of speed.

Fall at Capital



Albert B. Fal lhas gone back to Washington. Here he is as he looked soon after his arrival in the capital from his New Mexico ranch, where he had been in seclusion. The former secretary of interior faces trial Nov. 22 for conspiring with E. L. Doheny, Sr., E. L. Doheny, Jr., and Harry Sinclair to gyp the government out of its naval oil reserves.

Willoughby's Play A Feature.

Willoughby shone for Maryville, particularly in the running back of punts. O'Banion, who played slightly more than half the game, was better than Maryville fans ever saw him before. But the rest of the Maryville team made possible every run made and every catch, so it was a case of honors shared.

Maryville led in first downs, 10 to 6. Warrensburg, however, totaled 140 yards from scrimmage to 96 for the Bearcats. Maryville completed four passes for 61 yards, had nine incomplete, and three intercepted. The Mules completed three for 42 yards, missed three, and had one intercepted.

Warrensburg punts averaged 43 yards, while Maryville kicks averaged 33 yards. Maryville fumbled once and Warrensburg three times. Maryville ran back punts for 111 yards and Warrensburg ran back one punt for 30 yards.

The Bearcats will finish their season on Thanksgiving Day when they play Tarkio College here.

The St. Joseph Alumni All-Stars, undefeated this season will play Conception College at Conception Junction Sunday afternoon.

Conception has a light but fast team and has been schooled well in forward passing, the main forte of the All-Stars, so plenty of aerial action should be seen in the game.

Kansas Town Brings Ordinances to Date

Burlington, Kan., Nov. 12.—Burlington today is one of the few Kansas towns that has all up-to-date city ordinances. The task of rescinding old laws and useless city ordinances and of bringing the city laws up to cope with modern times has been completed by the city council after months of work.

The work was done under the direction of the Kansas League of Municipalities, of which Burlington is a member. Many of the old city ordinances were passed under state laws that have been repealed since, leaving the city ordinances still in effect but unlawful. Many ordinances have been repealed without any being passed in their stead because the old ordinances applied to things that do not exist now.

ONLY TOUCHDOWN IS MADE BY ALBANY NEAR GAME'S END.

HOMECOMING IS NEXT

Maysville High To Come Here for Last Game of Spoofhounds' Grid Season.

Late in the fourth quarter of the Maryville-Albany football game at Albany yesterday afternoon an Albany backfield man drifted around the Maryville right end for 6 points and the only score of the game. The game was closely contested, and was anybody's contest until the final whistle.

The Maryville team tried two place kicks, one in the first quarter and one in the last. Both were unsuccessful. A number of fumbles marred the game, which was played by Maryville with a number of regular men not in the line-up because of scholastic difficulties and injuries.

The Maryville team motored to Albany, leaving here about 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The players returned last night.

Albany had a good passing combination, and in the second half uncorked a bottle full of flips which had the Maryville gridders guessing. On the other hand, Coach Croy's Spoofhounds got away several times for nice gains through the line and around the ends.

Next week Maryville will meet Maysville High in the homecoming game on Friday afternoon. The hour for this game has not yet been set.

Maysville has a strong team this year and has won over both Albany and Savannah. Cameron, however, defeated the Maysville team.

Homecoming at the high school will be celebrated also by a program in the morning. The season will close on this day.

The Maryville line-up yesterday was: E. Howard, re; Hall, rt; Nichols, rg; Smith, c; Thompson, lg; Fisher, lt; New, le; F. Howard, q; Wilson, rh; Bush, lh; Keever, fb.

Mrs. Norman Chamberlin of Albany will return home tomorrow after a week's visit with Mr. Chamberlin's sister, Mrs. Grace Snook, and friends.

CADET TEAMS NEAR THE TOP

ARMY—NAVY GAME THIS YEAR MAY DECIDE NATIONAL TITLE.

HAVE GOOD RECORDS

Defeat Of Notre Dame And Georgetown This Week Would Make Service Elevens East's Best.

New York, Nov. 12.—For the first time since football really became national, a final game of the season for recognized national championship is in the making.

The Army and the Navy teams may play their annual game not only for the traditional flag but for the national title.

The Army, of course, has had great teams in the past and the Navy has had as many, but it never before so happened that the Cadets and the Midshipmen had such a high class team in the same season—a season with so many other great teams.

Two formidable barriers, however, stand in the way of the West Point and Annapolis teams. To go into their annual game undefeated the Army will have to beat Notre Dame Saturday and the Navy will have to beat Georgetown.

The whole country knows what can be expected of the Irish of Notre Dame but to the fans in removed territory the Irish of Georgetown may not be so respected.

Georgetown, the leading scoring team of the country, has developed fast since being defeated by West Virginia and the team has been pointed for a neighborhood battle with the Navy.

The Army has beaten Detroit, David Elkins, Syracuse, Boston University, Yale and Franklin Marshall and if the Cadets beat Notre Dame and the Navy, no stronger claim can be made by any other team, granting the fact in advance that the Western Conference will have a good team and that Stanford and California on the coast must be good teams.

Notre Dame has beaten Beloit, Minnesota, Northwestern, Georgia Tech and Indiana. If Notre Dame beats the Army and Drake beats Southern California in Los Angeles next month, Notre Dame, would be champions almost by acclamation.

The Navy has beaten Perdue, Richmond, Princeton, Colgate, Michigan and if the Midshipmen best Georgetown and the Army, no team in the country can boast of no defeats on such a formiddable schedule.

The best teams in the South, the Middle West and Far West, cannot be dismissed from a seat in the East by a wave of the hand and a verdict that they are not candidates but if it should happen that Ohio State be defeated by Michigan Saturday, then the dope will lead back to the support of the East.

The Woman Who Is Astounding America

MRS. PHILIP LYDIG
—the first wife of the late W. E. D. Stokes, a New York social leader for years, and descendant through her mother of the Spanish Duke d'Alba

Reveals Sensational Secrets of New York's Society

Mrs. Philip Lydig is astounding America. At last she opens the door to her life-time of experience—her associations with the men and women of New York's ultra-smart society. Tragedies that make you gasp are given in boldest relief—and in the next breath she tells you of the ridiculous and often amusing aspects of smart New York society.

TODAY a certain woman is famed as a leader of New York social life. Her husband owns one of the world's most valuable collections of art treasures. Her home is a mecca for nabobs and billionaires. Just a few years ago the same woman was a hopeless outcast. But she learned a little secret and started on the way to social prominence. What was the price she paid? How did she finally remove the last obstacle—the man who threatened to expose her methods and even bring her husband to financial failure?

This is only one of many such incidents that Mrs. Lydig gives with astonishing frankness in her article: "Frauds of Smart Society." This article is published in the December Red Book Magazine now on sale at all news-stands.

Is the Unwritten Marriage Law Passing?

As Discussed by JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY

OUT of the hodge-podge of thousands of tangled human relationships, Judge Lindsey has evolved a philosophy so courageous, so removed from old standards—so daring—that the nation is staggered. People, he declares, are making their own rules and laws, to suit their happiness and needs.

For example, he says—The love triangle is often a solution to marriage problems! One's love-life is his own and as long as he hurts no one, Society has no right to criticize or condemn.

That Infidelity is NOT at the root of marital troubles—but lack of fair play and a feeding of green eyed jealousy.

That Freedom in love affairs, in marriage, leads to a monogamic marriage of itself. You will gasp mentally when you read his article in the December Red Book Magazine—The Moral Revolt; never before has any publication let such frankness go uncensored.

You will wake up to changes in thought and action that are cropping up all about you!

It is a vital issue—and will be thrust into your own life with tremendous force, if it has not entered already. Which side of the fence are you on—have you the courage to agree with Judge Lindsey?

Who understands people in all their pretense and sham, groping and floundering, better than the author, the real author who does not exaggerate or color—but who paints word-pictures as true and realistic as any snapshot of life!

And never before have we been able to offer you a group of such popular and beloved writers as in this December Red Book Magazine—authors who write of people of today with a shrewd, searching understanding that is uncanny in its realism. Such as Rupert Hughes, Owen Johnson, Rita Weiman, Leroy Scott, Virginia Dale, Struthers Burt, Samuel Spewack and others—all names that mean stories that live for you packed with the pulsating romance of Life—its ecstasies and tragedies.
